1. The Girl Who Taught Me Divine Love

I don't remember her name, but I do remember her face. She was unlike the other girls I saw playing in the narrow streets of Havana, she was not burned from the sun, she was almost pale, between 9 and 11 years old, dark almond eyes, with two long ponytails going down the side. She must have noticed I was lost. I stuck out like a sore thumb, the only foreigner on that street in old Havana. I dared to venture off the usual tourist path, entered neighborhoods so I could see and feel how people lived in this beautiful yet very problematic country. She stopped next to me and smiled without saying a word as though expecting me to tell her what I was doing there.

I tried to explain with the little Spanish I knew that I wanted to go to the main square. That did not work, but the little girl stood there with amazement in her eyes as she saw me struggle to find the right words. Then I remembered a landmark near my hotel, a restaurant. She immediately understood and told me to follow her. She walked with me to the end of the street and from there pointed to the direction of the restaurant which I could see at a distance.

I thanked her so many times, and without hesitations grabbed all the money I had in my right pants pocket and handed it to her. She did not take it. She seemed shocked, maybe scared, the money was probably more than most people made in a couple months of work. I assured her with the biggest heart warming smile I had that it's OK, it's a present for her because she was so kind and helped me. I know she felt my energy as her little hand opened up and I placed a couple of twenty dollar bills in them.

And then...she looked up at me
And I let my heart show, no games, no expectations, just gratitude. She saw it, she saw me, she felt me. We felt each other's energy.

And her whole face changed. Not just her lips, but her soul smiled.

With trembling hands, she took the money, and ran off, grinning, looking back at me again and again. Her joy echoing down the old cobblestone street of Old Havana like a hymn.

That moment burned itself into me. because I saw something most people miss.

2. How We Stain Our Children's Light

We have trained our children to be suspicious of love.

We taught them that nothing is free, that every kindness has a hook to it. That grownups are unpredictable, and love is a sales pitch.

But this girl showed me, when love and gratitude are real the soul recognizes it. And the heart opens like a flower.

As she disappeared around the corner, I stood there looking back, still, silent.

Not because I was stunned but because something ancient cracked open inside me. A whisper, not from the wind, but from within, and from all around me.

"That was me".

Not a thought, not a knowing.

Jesus

Not the church Jesus, not the Sunday school Jesus, but that and much more, the living, burning, all seeing love that walks in the streets of old Havana helps strangers and touches their souls with a smile.

It was him in her smile, Jesus, in her hands, in her hesitation, in her kindness.

3. A Calling, Not a Book

That is when I understood what this book had to be.

It is not a book, It is a calling. Not for religion, not for doctrine.

But a call for restoration.

The calling continued throughout my days and months. My youngest daughter Mirella the other day called me out, "daddy can we play?"

"Yes baby" I replied without taking my eyes off my laptop.

"Daddy can you please get off your laptop so we can play?"

It was that moment it hit me hard. I heard it, the voice, it reached all of my being yet again, "get up, be with her".

What was I doing? Not paying attention, not being present. I felt it at that moment once again, the calling. I stood up with a burst of energy, shut my laptop and was present with my daughter for the rest of the afternoon until she fell asleep.

Our children are our present and our future. Your child, my child, the neighbors child, black, white, Asian, Muslim, Buddhist, Christian, Hindi, any way you look at it, they are all our children.

Our greatest treasure, a diamond that is so pure and clean, that reflects the sun's light in the purest form. It is up to us to nurture our children, to guide them towards a brighter future, not just for them as individuals, but for all mankind.

Imagine a future where children are taught not in the traditional way, not through culture, not through family, country, but through divine guidance. Imagine if through these teachings we can maintain these diamonds in their purest possible form, instead of polluting them with our wants, needs, do's and don'ts.

Our children will understand their unique identity and also realize we are all one energy, we are all interconnected, thus they will come together and heal our earth, and heal each other. Imagine such children. Imagine our children rising above divisions of race, color, religion, culture, country, as they stand united as humans, co-exist with nature, animals, standing as one global family, without borders, physical or otherwise.

4. Raising Diamonds, Not Dust

Our children are the hope of tomorrow, where they will create a world we could only dream of, filled with compassion, and love, where peace and harmony reign.

We, their parents, reside in a world that is divided, and controlled by a few, yet through the proper training we will remind children of their divine existence, their oneness with the creator, with nature, with all living beings, here and beyond.

They are innocent and untainted by the basics and prejudices that often cloud the minds of adults. They now see each other as playmates, as friends, not as strangers divided by invisible lines of differences which adults have created for them, as lines in the sand. In the children's eyes we are all the same, and this is a beautiful perspective that gives us hope for a better tomorrow. The tomorrow where skin color, woman, man, or animal, countries and cultures, will not define us, but rather the content of our character and the love in our hearts, and ultimately the frequency, the energy we vibrate on.

Imagine a child of wealthy parents playing with innocence, joy and happiness at the park with a child who appears to be from a less affluent family. At that moment the affluent mother of the child decides to take her child away and tell him, "don't you ever play with him again. They are not the same as us."

That pure diamond we talked about just got a smudge of dirt on it. Tomorrow it will be more dirt, he will see or hear from the father, and then more dirt from school, from friends as he grows up, from society, from mass media.

Soon this once happy, joyful child who was emanating God's divine light and reflecting it like a diamond reflecting the sun, has no more light to reflect because he is filled with dirt.

It is our divine calling to protect all children and teach them through our special KiranChild programs to know of their divinity, and protect them from the mud we place on them, keeping them as pure as a diamond as possible.

It is our duty to protect the innocent who ever may be, our children, all children, and to foster an environment where they can thrive and grow, unburdened by our own problems, do's and don'ts, hatred and discrimination. We must teach them to respect and love themselves, thus they will be able to respect and love others. They must honor all life, stand up for what is right, and always do unto others what they would like to be done unto them.

Our children are the light bearers, they will carry the torch of hope, illuminating the world, a more inclusive world. Imagine if a small portion of the people we know of now, presidents, politicians, people of authority were raised as such children of light. There would be no wars, there would be peace, compassion. Now imagine this on a larger scale, in the millions, in the billions, we would no longer have borders, countries, armies, wars. We would thrive spiritually, mentally, physically, as we would be one with our earth, with mother nature. Our children would excel in every aspect of life as we know it, and more. Life as we do not know it now, because we are damaged goods! Our children however will go above and beyond anything we can possibly imagine.

And so, as parents, as adults, we embark on a journey, a mission to protect and nurture these precious gems, these diamonds, our children, Earth's children. By teaching them through KiranChild we equip them with the tools to navigate a world that is often clouded by prejudice and discrimination. Through our special programs, we teach our children how to embrace their unique identities while recognizing we are all connected, as beams of light, energy from the divine source. We will guide our children to stand up for what is right, to respect all life, and to lead with love, compassion, while attuned with their divine nature.

It is said, "tell me who your friends are and I will tell you who you are". It is very true, however this also entails a family. Tell me who your parents are and I will tell you who you are. Why I say this you ask? If I am a parents that who has so much mud on my eternal light , because my parents did not know or did not care to help me stay pure and one with the divine, then I as a parent will not teach my child how to be the bearer of light, goodness and compassion. That is where other parents who are awakened ones with less dirt on their diamond souls, will lead through example helping their own children while touching the lives of all children and parents who are clean enough to absorb the divine light in their souls.

And so, we embark on a journey, a mission to protect and nurture these precious gems, our children. We must equip them with the tools to navigate a world that is often clouded by prejudice and discrimination. Through our special programs, we teach them to embrace their unique identities while recognizing our shared humanity.

5. The KiranChild Blueprint

KiranChild guides them to stand up for what is right, to respect all life, and to lead with love and compassion. With the help of technology we can place KiranChild in every home, whether it be a privileged industrial country or a third world country. Nowadays almost everyone has a phone, thus able to download the application of KiranChild. A teacher in Africa can teach the children in class, a father in Denmark can teach his children at home, A mother in Argentina can teach her children while they are playing at the park, there is no restrictions, just the will to keep our children as "clean as possible", allowing them to manifest their true divine nature.

Let us envision a future where these children, now grown, shine brightly like unblemished diamonds. They have risen above the divisions and borders that once constrained us, our parents, and grandparents, embracing a global perspective that transcends race, religion, and culture. Imagine a world with thousands, millions, billions of awakened souls. They are the light bearers, illuminating the path toward a more inclusive and harmonious world. United in their divine existence, they heal the wounds of the past and forge a new era of peace and understanding. In such a world the control, the negativity, the manipulation of negative forces will have no way to blossom.

The great leader Mahatma Gandhi said, "If we are to teach real peace in this world-we have to begin with the children".

We must all realize that children are not incomplete adults, we must realize that children are the wave in the ocean of divinity, they are complete souls here with a mission. There comes a time that every generation must ask the question. What world am I creating? What world will I leave behind to my children? What am I teaching them? What kind of adults will our children be?

The healing our world needs will not commence from politics, businesses, or anything else. Imagine all the above as software. Thus far most parents and societies as a whole are creating and installing software in our children. What we need to do is make sure their operating system is as flawless as it was when they arrived. Thus the teaching of our children will begin in your kitchen table, in the living room, on their bed, in classrooms, in the parks. It will begin when the child embraces their divinity, remembers to use compassion over competition, and love over fear.

This is not merely a parenting book. This is a call to awaken-to comprehend, to recognize the divine assignment places upon all of us adults, parents or not alike: to raise children who carry the light of kindness and love forward.

We must remember that children are not incomplete adults but complete souls here on a mission. Thus, before we teach them how to read, they already feel, before we teach them how to speak, they already understand energy. Before they become students in a traditional classroom we tell them how to be, think and act, however they are already an eternal spirit with divine potential.

If we remember all the above, if we remember they are eternal souls here on their own mission, everything changes. How we speak to them, how we discipline them, how we guide them, and how we love them and respect them. We understand they are not here for us to shape them according to our wants and needs, or the structured societies we reside in. They are not here for us to build them a suit so they can wear them for the rest of their lives, they are here for us to help them unfold their divinity within and realize their true purpose.

6. Parenting as Soul-Guiding

Remember, "You are not just raising a child, you are guiding a soul. The body will grow with or without you, but the spirit needs your guidance.

-Giorgio Michailidis

Have you ever wondered why we feel so good around children? Their energy is so pure and soothing, their actions so very unconditional without any manipulation, all they seek is nurturing and love. They are still in the pure, untainted state as they came from the infinite, from the creator. It is the children that remind us who we are.

Children will not learn from instruction alone, they will also learn from reflection, and you are the one they see most. The path of parenthood is not just about raising children, it's about guiding a soul. Before a child goes to school they have already absorbed a myriad of habits, wisdom, energies from us, the parents, grandparents, siblings, family environment.

Whether with intention or not we teach them who we are. "Do as I say not as I do". Everyone knows that this will not work with a child, they will follow our example.

The question is not if we are teaching them, but rather, what we are teaching them.

KiranChild fills in this gap, and assists parents in teaching through tone, patience, presence, actions. We help parents guide their child to remember who they are and keep their diamond clean from smudges and dirt, sometimes placed by us unintentionally.

A journey of being a parent is not just about raising a child, building them a good resume, so they may repeat a similar life to ours or slightly better. Parenthood is about guiding a soul.

We, as parents, have the power to either dim our children's light or help them shine even brighter. It is our responsibility to create the environment where they can flourish, without burdens, especially burdens created by us, imposed upon them, caused by our own biases and prejudices. We have to teach them about their divine nature and connection to all living beings, we can help our children embrace their true identities as children of the divine, as light bearers and agents of change for a better world. Imagine a world where children are unblemished by us, by societal divisions, a world where they lead with compassion and love, creating a new world, a future we could only dream and hope for.

The KiranChild system is a beacon of hope, offering special programs that nurture children's unique souls, while simultaneously fostering an understanding of our shared humanity. Technology is our ally in this endeavor, allowing us to spread this education far and wide, from a coffee shop in Rome, to the province in the Philippines, to bustling market in Turkey, to a busy street in Beijing, to the kitchen table in Compton CA, to the living room of Park Avenue in Manhattan, or to a remote school in Uganda. Regardless of a family's educational level, financial capabilities, culture, religion, upbringings, they are all connected with one cause in mind. To teach our children, the hope of our future, to help our children heal our world, our mother earth, and all mankind.

All children being taught these valuable lessons will not see the world as we do, or as our parents, and grandparents did. These children will embrace love, compassion, their aspirations, their belief system will be for the highest good of all. The individuals they will look up to are leaders like Mahatma Gandhi, Mother Teresa, and many more., who have left a positive footprint in our world for all of humanity.

The KiranChild is a revolutionary approach to learning, a system, a movement that is gaining momentum all across the world, in homes, in communities, with technology we are spreading this education far and wide, empowering parents and teachers to guide the next generation towards a higher purpose, a brighter, more inclusive future. It is through these collective efforts that we can ensure our children remain untainted, without "dirt", our dirt, society's dirt, the dirt of discrimination and prejudice. We are allowing their divine light to shine through and guide us all into a new world, a better world.

We do not believe young minds are blank slates that we can train and program any way we want, but rather vessels brimming with potential to remember their divinity.

7. The Unseen War for Our Children

I do know that there will be forces, seen and unseen, cloaked with clothing of deception, who will try to stop the spread of this education for our children, labeling us in every possible way. All you have to do is remember that the answer lies within yourself. Pray, ask for guidance if you have doubts.

KiranChild is creating the new generation leaders, compassionate souls who understand their intrinsic worth and the value of their fellow humans, while feeling their energetic connection and the collective consciousness. Our children will bring us out of the darkness, away from evil, they will raise everyone's energy and we will all vibrate at a higher frequency.

This is a curriculum that transcends the confines of traditional academia, teaching students to embrace their individuality while fostering a deep sense of unity with one global family, all humanity.

When a single child enrolls, a seed of hope is planted, a promise is given for a brighter tomorrow. These are the children which will unlock a future where love and compassion reign, where the lines that once divided us, written in the sand by men of power to divide us and control us are erased forever. We are building this future, one child at a time, as we guide these precious souls towards their true purpose, allowing them to be guided from within, from the divine source, not by man.

Together, let us embark on this noble journey, for our children are the hope of tomorrow, and it is our duty to protect and nurture their innate goodness. In a traditional school environment around the world our children would learn how to write, read, math, science, history. That is all fine, and an extra curriculum to what we offer our children

The KiranChild curriculum that emphasizes seven basic skills:

1. Playing games ( We believe through every game a child can remember and understand many valuable lessons)

2. Reading Stories (Children will learn many valuable lessons)

3. Reading stories from all religions (Children will learn many valuable lessons from religions around the world, and learn to respect all)

4. Learning to meditate (where children will learn to connect with the unseen divine energy of creation)

5. Practicing Yoga, Reiki, (grow a strong, flexible body outside, while learning mental discipline within)

6. Exercising according to their age through games. Sound body, sound mind.

7. Many mental and spiritual exercises, theory, practice, results, combinations explored, and explained, (Telepathy, visualization, remote viewing, telekinesis, music, sounds, breath exercises and much more)
